

VP Bank publishes tenth edition of investment magazine "Telescope"

Vaduz, 29 November 2024

The latest issue of the VP Bank investment magazine "Telescope" was released today and is entitled "Raw materials - no progress without them". This is already the tenth edition of this magazine.

Raw materials that are sought after most have changed over the centuries. Technological progress has shaped demand, and so today it is raw materials such as copper, rare earths or lithium that are valuable. This is because they are key to the energy transition.

In the latest issue, Chief Investment Officer Felix Brill and his team examine which raw materials will be needed in the future, how quickly oil, coal and gas can be replaced, how raw material markets work and how investors can participate in these developments.

With its magazine "Telescope", VP Bank provides readers with fresh insights into investment topics. The magazine is published twice a year in German and in English.
